my yummy valentine

Blood oranges add a rosy tint and citrusy zest to these individual-sized yogurt parfaits with homemade cookies. A perfect treat to top off a Valentine's Day meal!

Chocolate Blood Orange Parfaits

Serves 12. Prep time: 30 minutes active; 50 minutes total.

- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup cocoa
- $2\frac{1}{2}$ cups powdered sugar
- $\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon salt
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons blood orange zest
- 4 large egg whites
- 1 cup walnuts, coarsely chopped
- 2 blood oranges
- 6 cups whole milk Greek yogurt
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups powdered sugar
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- Mint sprigs, for garnish

1. Line a sheet pan with parchment. Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Zest one blood orange. In a large bowl or stand mixer, whisk cocoa, sugar and salt. In a glass measuring cup, combine egg whites and vanilla, then slowly beat into dry ingredients on low speed. Beat at medium speed for 2 minutes, until glossy. Add walnuts and orange zest, and mix into batter. Drop scant quarter-cup mounds three inches apart on the prepared pan, and use a spoon to spread the batter out to half-inch thick cookies.
2. Put sheet pan on the middle oven rack and reduce heat to 325 degrees F. Bake until thin cracks appear, about 15 to 17 minutes. Allow to cool completely before removing the cookies from the pan; peeling off the parchment paper if necessary.
3. Place yogurt in a medium bowl and stir in powdered sugar and vanilla. Reserve. Cut one blood orange in half, and squeeze over a small cup to extract the juice. Use a knife to slice the rind and pith away from the remaining orange and half-orange, and then use a paring knife to remove the orange segments from the white membranes. Cut segments in half crosswise.
4. To assemble, use twelve large wine glasses or twelve 8-ounce glass ramekins. Break each cookie into four pieces. Place a quarter cup of yogurt mixture in each glass or ramekin, then add two pieces of cookie. Top with another quarter cup of yogurt, add four orange pieces and two more cookie pieces, then drizzle a little of the blood orange juice around the edge of the glass. Repeat process until all glasses are filled.
5. Refrigerate for at least two hours, and garnish with sprigs of mint before serving.

Make the perfect parfait for everyone!
